DETAILED ACTION

Claim Objections

1. Claim 25 is objected to because of the following informalities: The word “for” is misspelled as “fro”. Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-25 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Dragosh (607886) in view of White et al (6408272).

As per claims 1,10,14,23,24, Dragosh (607886) teaches a method for processing speech audio in a client device (abstract) comprising:

“selecting a speech grammar....device” as selecting the grammar for the appropriate application (col. 4 lines 45-56);

“characterizing....grammar” as characterizing based on the application (col. 4 lines 58-61);

“based on the characterization.....server in the network” as downloading the grammar from the server if it is determined to be the grammar that is wanted (col. 5 lines 9-16, lines 30-50).

As per claims 1,10,14,23,24, Dragosh (607886) teaches the location of the grammar to be chooseable, but however, does not explicitly teach determining at the client side to perform the process at a server. White et al (6408272), however, teaches the evaluation of speech processing capability at the local device, and based upon performance determination, transfers the speech processing to a remote device when the local device cannot handle the speech processing (White et al (6408272), abstract, Fig. 4, col. 17 line 63 – col. 18 line 18). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art of speech processing to enhance the Dragosh (607886) system that handles grammar processing with the ability to make a determination of processing capability on the local device (and hence send the processing to a remote device when the local device cannot handle such processing) because it would advantageously shift the bulk of the hardware/software requirements to a remote location, and therefore not straining the requirements for the local device (White et al (6408272), col. 2 line 62 – col. 3 line 5).

As per claims 2,15,25, the combination of Dragosh (607886) in view of White et al (6408272) teaches establishing a communication session and querying the speech server (Dragosh (607886), col. 5 lines 27-45).

As per claims 3,16, the combination of Dragosh (6078886) in view of White et al (6408272) teaches uploading the grammar (Dragosh (6078886), col. 5 lines 30-32).

As per claims 4,17, the combination of Dragosh (6078886) in view of White et al (6408272) teaches registering the speech grammar (as loading the grammar with a returned handle (Dragosh (6078886), col. 5 lines 58-63).

As per claims 5-9, 11-13,19-22, the combination of Dragosh (6078886) in view of White et al (6408272) teaches determination of the type/size of grammar needed ,i.e., complexity, (a stored “canned” grammar, vs. a specialized grammar → Dragosh (6078886), col. 5 lines 32-37), determination of locations, including locally or remotely (either stored locally or at a specific URL – Dragosh (6078886), col. 5 lines 40-44).
